The very nature of scrap metal requires highly specialized and experienced inter ventions. For effective inspections G.I.S uses only the most highly qualified and experienced metallurgical engineers to provide scrap metal (ferrous and non ferrous) inspections and services in accordance to international standards.

With a network of specialist teams situated in key locations around the world, G.I.S verifies that the goods traded comply with their contractual terms. Our inspection services help shippers, traders, end-users and government bodies assess the quality, quantity and integrity of their products. G.I.S offers its services to all sectors of the metal recycling industry

Contact us to find out more.

The very nature of scrap metal requires highly specialized and experienced inter ventions. For effective inspections G.I.S uses only the most highly qualified and experienced metallurgical engineers to provide scrap metal (ferrous and non ferrous) inspections and services in accordance to international standards.With a network of specialist teams situated in key locations around the world, G.I.S verifies that the goods traded comply with their contractual terms. Our inspection services help shippers, traders, end-users and government bodies assess the quality, quantity and integrity of their products. G.I.S offers its services to all sectors of the metal recycling industryContact us to find out more.